

Music in our heads

In this workshop, we will actively play the flute, without any scores. We will perform the music that is already present in our heads. We will start at ease, for example with a scale we all know well. We will explore, while playing, what music is present in our mind and how we can 'amplify' this.

At the end of the workshop, you will have a pretty good idea about the purpose of active sound imagery. We will discuss the role of this so called 'audiation' during practicing and performing. We will also explore the relationship between audiation and the enjoyment of flute playing and music making!

This workshop is of high importance to both amateurs and professional musicians.
